

CV: ANDRIES HENDRIK KOTZE

I am a goal-driven individual that is willing to take on any challenge that confronts me, no matter the extent of the situation. When taking on any challenge, I believe that hard work is the only tool that will get oneself to his aspirations. I am a confident individual that can delegate effectively, whilst respecting and taking the feelings of others into consideration. My life decisions are driven by my firm Christian principles, and I am a true believer that everything happens for a reason. I value time with my family and friends and often find myself living for the outdoors. I love to travel and believe that travelling is the university of life.

SKILLS & ABILITIES

- IT proficiency:
Extensive knowledge of Microsoft Office
Basic experience on AllyCAD
 - Interpersonal:
I have well developed people skills as a result of various student leader positions I have held since school. I am an attentive listener with the ability to work well with my colleagues and participate in group discussions. My interpersonal skills have further been developed by leading Bible study groups and participating in group activities in the residence. My work experience as an intern have assured that I can effectively communicate with individuals that have different personalities.
 - Analytical:
Due to the nature of the field of study I am in, I value the importance of analyzing a problem from various points of view before deciding on an appropriate, innovative solution. My work experience has taught me the vital skill of first understanding any problem on paper, before a practical solution can be found.
